Introduction:

Tripura is located in the north-eastern part of India and is bordered by Bangladesh to the west, north, and south, and by the Indian states of Assam to the north-east and Mizoram to the east.

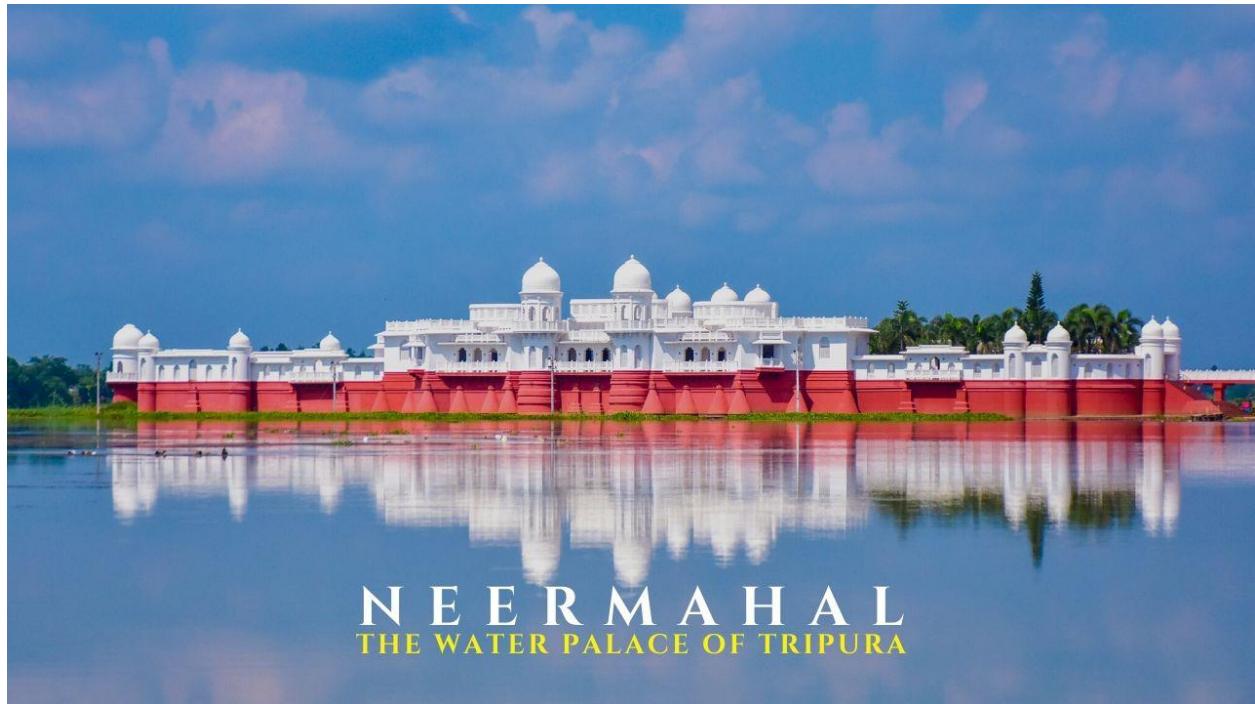

The capital city of Tripura is Agartala.

Ujjayanta Palace:

Located in the heart of Agartala, the capital city, Ujjayanta Palace is a magnificent former royal residence converted into a museum. It showcases the rich history, culture, and art of Tripura through its exhibits, including royal artifacts, paintings, sculptures, and more.

Neermahal:

Known as the "Water Palace," Neermahal is a stunning architectural marvel situated in the middle of Rudrasagar Lake near Melaghar. Built in the 1930s by Maharaja Bir Bikram Kishore Manikya, this palace reflects a fusion of Mughal and Hindu architectural styles. Visitors can enjoy boat rides to reach the palace and explore its grandeur.

Unakoti:

Unakoti meaning "one less than a crore" in Bengali, is an ancient pilgrimage site known for its rock-cut sculptures and carvings dating back to the 7th-9th centuries. It is located near Kailashahar in North Tripura district and is believed to be associated with Hindu mythology.

Tripura Sundari Temple:

Tripura Sundari Temple: Dedicated to the Hindu goddess Tripura Sundari (also known as Tripurasundari or Tripureshwari), this temple is one of the 51 Shakti Peethas in India. It is located in the ancient city of Udaipur, about 55 kilometers from Agartala. The temple's architecture and religious significance make it a popular pilgrimage site.

Jampui Hills:

Jampui Hills: Situated in the northern part of Tripura, Jampui Hills is known for its picturesque landscapes, pleasant climate, and vibrant tribal culture. Visitors can enjoy trekking, nature walks, and stunning views of sunrise and sunset from various viewpoints.

Sepahijala Wildlife Sanctuary:

Sepahijala Wildlife Sanctuary: This sanctuary, located about 25 kilometers from Agartala, is home to a diverse range of flora and fauna, including rare species like spectacled monkeys, clouded leopards, and various species of birds. Visitors can explore the sanctuary through nature trails, boating, and wildlife safaris.
